J. C. THOMPSON GETS TALLY-HO AWARD

Moore Adds to His Trophies—Miss Fleitmann, Crippled, Receives Society Welcome.

Here is what Miss Louisa Long, of Kansas City, Mo., did in the space of one hour last night, at the fifth day of the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden. Garbed in a charming park costume she drove her high-top wheeler drawn by Renalation to a brilliant win for the Waldorf-Astoria Cup, defeating Earl Grey, the 1913 champion. Then, slipping on the 1913 champion, she jumped into an American road wagon, with her trotter illumination before, and after a terrific ride, was awarded fourth place. Re-riding the box seat beside J. C. Thompson when the bugle blew for the next event, and with a gay red hat, which exactly matched her wonderful, tall-ho, she materially aided in winning the show's most prized trophy, the $1,000 Alfred G. Vanderbilt memorial gold cup, from William H. Moore, for the best four-hand horse shown to a road coach.

No sooner had she been helped down from the top story of the victorious coach, than she prepared for the next event, a collection of three harness horses shown in single harness, and driving Renalation again, she led driving Renalation and Consternation to second place, being defeated only by the Moore pair of Lord and Lady Seaton and Bountiful. Is there any wonder, then, that Miss Long's appearance in the arena is the signal for prolonged cheering every time she shows?

Miss Long's feat becomes all the more remarkable when it is pointed out that there is as much difference driving an English as there is playing cricket and football. To win the coveted trophy for the George Boldt prize she had to preserve a Britannic posture during the entire ride, holding her reins with one hand, while she inclined a graceful whip at the proper English angle with the other.

In the other class, all the strength of American womanhood was required to keep her speeding trotter, and only the restless behavior of illumination prevented her from making a better showing, as she drove superbly.

Road Coaches Show Well. It was the appearance of the two laurians roared coaches, representing the ultimate syllables in tally-ho equipment, which received the most attention of the evening. These coaches were shown Wednesday afternoon, and Mr. Thompson's four were easy winners. But last night the judge flashed a new set of horses in Lady Gray and Smasher, Guardsman and General, two bays and two grays, with a gray cock-horse trailing.

The new combination was puzzling to the stand for a while, and Mr. Moore, who was at the whip, rode round and around to the delight of the onlookers who, no doubt, recalled the Pickwickian days of the elder Walter. The judge's foot-boy was in excellent condition again, but was successful in restraining his instrument while his competitor trumpeted, but he had been unable to do so on the occasion of the former showing of the coaches. When, after continual encouragement from the crowd, the Moore outfit was finally called in and took a place next to the closure, it looked as though the judge was to get one more out of the already overladen closet, in spite of Miss Long's dashing appearance aloft the rival wagon.

But Counselor and Solicitor, Barker and Chancellor, bring to the fore the honor of the evening, and Mr. Thompson had the proud privilege of leading his rival around the ring and first through the gate.

Interest of the afternoon was centered
